

Araya

June 2026

It's 2050 and every household has an AI assistant.

Araya is sent to help Ethan, a writer in a time where writing is a dying profession. When his wife is seriously injured in a car crash, doctors offer one hope - an experimental transference of her memories into a virtual system.

Zara, though, is pregnant and the baby isn't Ethan's. He needs access to her most secret memories to discover the truth.

Araya is a gripping, speculative exploration of the near future and its new moralities.

The Publisher

Hawkwood Books has been operating since 2006.

We publish a range of genres in paperback with distinctive colour-coded covers. Some titles are also offered in electronic formats.

Though small, our standards are high and we print through a top class company.

Authors come from all walks of life with vastly different approaches to writing.

Hawkwood offers a way in to writers whose works may have been overlooked elsewhere.

Our books are occasionally bought by publishers with greater reach worldwide.

One of our books has been nominated for the Carnegie Medal and other positively reviewed in national media.

We distribute mainly through Gardners and our titles are available through all reputable outlets.
