

Partly Sane, Prose Merry and Rhyme

By David Hogarth

January 2025

ISBN: 978-1-7393239-9-8

RRP: £9.99

Genre: Poetry

David Hogarth (Rise and Shine, Little Man) has created an intriguing collection of poetical peepholes into contemporary society with all its foibles, faults and frustrations.

Don't look for romance, pastoral, pastoral-comical, tragical-comical or any well-trodden literary genre. These are unique, personal, intimate observations with little heed to political correctness, but nevertheless truthful, honest, fair, touching and sometimes desperate scribbles on our media-led lives.

Wee Jimmy Krankie
Runs through the town,
Upstairs and downstairs
In her tartan crown,
Tapping on the windows,
Knocking on the doors,
Trying to drum up business
For her failing lifelong cause.

I will prance the dance
I will honour pregnant pauses
I will take more part
I will love more art
I will help more where I can
I will do my best
I will more or less
Remain a simple honest man.

The Author

David was born in June 1959 in Blackpool. He attended St. Johns Church of England Primary and Junior Schools before later attending Blackpool Grammar School. His working career has included, Entertainment Publicity, Newspaper Advertising, Estate Agency, Golf Course Management, Lecturing and Assessor work, and more recently as a Taxi owner/driver and shareholder with a local firm in his home town of Blackpool. He also attended Foothill College in California where he played on the California State Championship winning Football Team in 1981 and 82.

2006-2024